FOR DINNER TO-MORROW. What Mrs. Whitney Says About This All-

Important Matter. Bright Betty O'Dowd, writing from Washington to the Savannah News, says: Mrs. Secretary Whitney is one of the most charming women in Washington. The interviewer has little trouble in apapproaching her, but will find it hard to get away. I talked with her yesterday about her Thanksgiving arrangements.
"Well," she said, "our Thanksgiving dinner is always served at 2 o'clock, because on that day we have the children with us, and their unrestricted enjoyment requires more time for digestion than usual. We also try to have the old-fashioned edibles served very much in the usual way.

TURNEY, OF COURSE. Our Thanksgiving dinner will probably consist, first, of oyster soup, which will be followed by fish. Then the great turkey, with cranberry sauce and vegeta-bles. We always bring the pies on at once. I think they make the table very attractive, with their crisp, unbroken sur-faces covered with white sugar. I should consider the dinner incomplete without cramberry tarts, with strips of dough, delicately browned, across the top. HER HUSBAND'S MOTHER'S IDEAS ABOUT

I have adopted the ideas of my husband's mother on the pie question, and we have no end of ples; mince pie, pumpkin pie, apple pie and all the old fashoned varieties. My mother-in-law makes a kind that I never see elsewhere. A Charlotte pudding affair, the name of which I do not remember, although it has one. It is made of grated apples and whipped cream. At my own home in Ohlo it was our custom to serve a small pig, roasted whole, which stood in the middle of the table, with a lemon in its mouth. Our boy is always happy when he is at Grandma Whitney's, because she lets him have unlimited mince pic. He has it for breakfast and dinner and a piece for lunch. He declares that grandma's pies never make him sick.

THE BRIDE'S MOTHER. Mrs. Endicott says: After the table is Mrs. Endicott says: After the table is cleared there is one part of the ceremony we never omit. The youngest toddler in the company, the little child that has come into the family since the last Thanksgiving festival, is placed on his feet on the table, while his mother stands at the opposite end, and the rest of the family gather at the sides, to guard his safe journey from one end of the table to the other; every time he totters there are many ready hands extended to guard are many ready hands extended to guard his uncertain steps till be arrives triumphantly at the other end.

THE P. C. S WIFE. Postmaster-General Dickinson's wife said: "I would have the dinner composed of all the homely viands of country life, and placed on the groaning table all at once, no waiters, but the sweet service of love, as those surrounding it helped each other; fashionable course abolished, with the side dishes and ceremony; no fash-ionable acquaintances invited that day. liam Ward and Annie Curry; Scott Fry and Lizzie Williams; Alonzo Tweedale, Philadelphia, Pa., and Edith Wall; George Freeman and Lillie M. The Split Not Discussed Here. Colonel M. E. Urell, senior vice-commander of the G. A. R. of the District, states that he has noticed the reports touching the threatened disaffection in Indiana, but had paid no ened disaffection in Indiana, but had paid no attention to them, as the matter had not been discussed by G. A. R. men here. "The Grand Army of the Republic." he said, "is a firmly non-partisan organization and always has been." He cited many well-known G. A. R. men who are identified with the Democratic party outside the order. The last commander, elected for two terms, is a hemocrat, Major J. B. Burke. Colonel Urell doubted if there has been any movement in Indiana and Medical Director Howard and other comrades present agreed with him.

THE INJUNCTION DENIED.

Mrs. Cole Secure in the Possession of Her Bay Window for a While, Argument in the case of the United States against Mrs. Annie E. Cole has been concluded and has resulted in a decision by Judge Merrick that the injunction to stop the construction of the bay window, which she was putting up on the parking at Massachusetts avenue and

M street, be denied. Judge Merrick said that in this case there were two other courses open, one to proceed by indictment and the other by a suit at law. In the case of a pub-lic nuisance injunctional proceedings should be instituted only when the emergency was very great. In this case there was no obstruction of the public highway; the limits of the parking had been defined and was no longer a part of the highway.
